Historic Overview:

John C. Stahl Jr., architect of many Detroit area churches, designed this two-story Colonial Revival house in 1904 for Frederick Linsell. The yellow brick house features fan light gable dormers and a stone framed Palladian window on its façade. The Linsell house was one of the first privately owned houses to be sold to Wayne State University as it expanded in the late 1930's and 1940's.¹
